Stockholm, September 24, 2019 – IRRAS, a medical technology company focused on commercializing innovative solutions for neurocritical care, announced today it will be exhibiting at EANS2019, the 19th European Congress of Neurosurgery, hosted by the European Association of Neurological Societies. EANS2019 is being held at the Convention Center Dublin, in Dublin, Ireland, on September 24-28, 2019.

Conference attendees are invited to visit IRRAS in booth #29 to learn more about IRRAS®, the world's first irrigating ventricular drainage system. IRRAS's unique mechanism of action addresses the complications associated with the current methods of managing intracranial fluid by using a dual-lumen catheter that combines automated irrigation, controlled drainage, and continuous ICP monitoring.

Dr. Behnam Rezai Jahromi, a leading neurosurgeon from Helsinki University Hospital, in Helsinki, Finland, will lead educational sessions in the IRRAS booth each day at 10:15 am. Dr. Rezai Jahromi will present his clinical experience using the novel system and answer questions about best practices using the device.

“With nearly 1,800 health care professionals in the neurosurgical space attending EANS2019, we are excited to have the opportunity to share our cutting-edge technology with neurosurgeons from around the world,” said Will Martin, Chief Commercial Officer of IRRAS.
